A founding partner of Cook, Little, Rosenblatt, & Manson, Jim Cook has helped the firm to carve out its niche in the competitive business law landscape. He is known as a business lawyer who is dedicated to entrepreneurial and technology-based businesses.

Jim advises his clients in all aspects of issues throughout the life cycle of their businesses. From business start-ups to mergers and acquisitions, Jim uses his experience to guide his clients through the finer aspects of business legal matters so his clients can focus on building their businesses. His clients look to him for sound advice on issues concerning the choice and organization of a business entity, ownership agreements between owners, debt and equity financing arrangements, joint ventures and strategic alliances, stock option plans, sales and distribution agreements, licensing arrangements, mergers and acquisitions, and other commercial arrangements.

He is active in the community, holding numerous positions in professional, technology, and non-profit organizations, where his longstanding leadership has helped shape the direction of many organizations.
